Jae-ho Sohn is a Certified Public Accountant and attorney at Shin & Kim LLC, where he advises and represents clients in complex litigation and regulatory matters involving accounting and financial issues, including accounting oversight, corporate governance, and control disputes.

Prior to joining Shin & Kim, he gained extensive experience in audit and accounting practices at Jeonghyun Accounting Corporation and Deloitte Anjin LLC. He also served as a member of the National Accounting Settlement Support Group organized by the Korean Institute of Certified Public Accountants, during which he was seconded to the Ministry of the Interior and Safety.

Mr. Sohn's practice focuses on accounting oversight-related disputes and regulatory responses, particularly in cases involving delisting, accounting irregularities, and audit opinions. Leveraging his dual expertise in law and accounting, he offers clients a strategic and analytically rigorous approach to resolving disputes in which financial disclosures and corporate accounting are central. He has particular strength in cases at the intersection of accounting and law, including disputes over internal controls, disclosure violations, and liability under the Capital Markets Act.
