Jinkyu Lee is a partner at Shin & Kim. Jinkyu has extensive experience counseling public and private companies on issues related to labor and employment laws, including labor union matters, workplace restructuring, reductions in force, harassment and discrimination issues, and internal investigations.

Jinkyu began his legal career as a Judge Advocate Officer in the Air Force after passing the 4th Bar Examination. He served as a military judge at the Air Force General Military Court, presiding over criminal trials related to civilian and military law. Subsequently, he was appointed to the Defense Security Command (DSC) where he handled military disciplinary and litigation matters, including providing legal advice on military secrets investigations and security regulations. He was later seconded to the Ministry of National Defense, where he worked on special tasks related to the Presidential Truth Commission on Deaths in the Military and amendments to military laws concerning the handling of military casualties.

Following his military service, Jinkyu joined Shin & Kim, specializing in labor & employment law. He counsels employers in connection with all aspects of labor and employment issues, including collective bargaining, unfair labor practice, illegal worker dispatch, and response to Labor Inspection by the Ministry of Employment and Labor. In addition, he practices transactional labor and employment law by assisting clients on complex corporate transactions, including negotiating and drafting labor and employment provisions of purchase agreements, conducting acquisition-related due diligence, and assessing a target's labor and employment law compliance and risks.

Jinkyu also routinely advises clients on day-to-day HR and personnel issues including wage and hour issues, structuring and drafting of employment, non-competition, non-solicitation, retention, and employment separation agreements. His robust experience in litigating informs his approach to counseling and transactional matters.
